II. What are ETA and ETIAS?

New European Travel Authorization: What You Need to Know for 2025

In 2025, travelers heading to Europe and the UK will need to complete a new online entry authorization process before their trip. While it may sound like an extra task to add to your pre-travel checklist, the process is designed to be quick, easy, and relatively inexpensive. It will also speed up your arrival in Europe enormously – a good thing after a flight. Fast Lane will help you!

The New Requirements

Travelers from the United States, Canada, and many other countries will need to preregister for entry authorization into Europe and the UK. This system is in place to streamline border security and improve the screening of visa-exempt travelers. The good news? The application process takes only a few minutes, and the fee is modest—typically about $10 for the UK's Electronic Travel Authorization (ETA) or €7 for the European Travel Information and Authorization System (ETIAS).

What are ETA and ETIAS?

The UK's ETA and the ETIAS for Europe are both designed to enhance security by pre-screening visitors who do not need a visa. These programs target citizens from countries like the US, Canada, Australia, and New Zealand, who can enter Europe or the UK without a visa for short stays.

The UK's ETA is mandatory for travelers from countries like the US and Canada, including those merely transiting through a UK airport. The ETIAS covers most European countries, with exceptions such as the Republic of Ireland and certain Eastern European nations like Bosnia-Herzegovina and Serbia.

How Do ETA and ETIAS Work?

To apply, travelers must fill out an online form before their trip. The process involves providing basic personal and travel information, followed by a small fee payment. The application must be submitted for each traveler, regardless of age (though for ETIAS, the fee is waived for children under 18 and seniors over 70).

Once submitted, most applications are reviewed and approved quickly—often within minutes or a day—although it's advisable to apply at least a month ahead of your trip, just in case there are any issues. After approval, the authorization is electronically linked to your passport, and you are good to go.

Which Countries Require ETA or ETIAS?

- ETA: Required for travel to the UK, including England, Scotland, Wales, and Northern Ireland. It's mandatory for anyone arriving at a UK airport, even if you're only changing planes.
- ETIAS: Required for most European countries, including popular destinations like France, Germany, and Italy. However, it's not needed for countries such as the Republic of Ireland or those outside the Schengen Area like the UK, Bosnia-Herzegovina, and Serbia.

Duration of ETA and ETIAS Approvals

- ETA: Once granted, it's valid for up to two years or until your passport expires, allowing multiple entries to the UK for stays of up to six months each.
- ETIAS: The ETIAS is valid for three years, as long as the traveler adheres to the Schengen Area's rule of no more than 90 days in any 180-day period.

Why These Programs?

The introduction of ETA and ETIAS is aimed at strengthening border security while easing the flow of travelers. These programs are modeled after the US's ESTA system, which has been in place since 2009. The goal is to enhance the security of both the UK and the Schengen Area countries by screening travelers before they arrive, rather than waiting until they reach the border.

The move also follows similar steps taken by other countries, like Australia and New Zealand, which have established their own electronic travel authorities for visa-exempt visitors.

What Does This Mean for Travelers in 2025?

The good news is that the ETA and ETIAS are simple processes that won't be as cumbersome as applying for a visa or renewing your passport. Most travelers will find that it takes just a few minutes to complete the application online. Once approved, you won't have to worry about additional paperwork when you arrive at your destination.

Airlines will likely be the primary means of ensuring passengers know about the ETA and ETIAS requirements, as they will probably check that travelers have completed the necessary registration before boarding. Automated "entry/exit" systems are also being set up at airports across Europe, where passengers will use kiosks to scan their passports and biometric data (such as facial images and fingerprints). While some airports may still have human border control officers for a while, these changes will ultimately make the entry process faster and more efficient.

Although it's one more thing to add to your pre-trip to-do list, applying for an ETA or ETIAS is a small price to pay for the ease and speed it will bring when traveling to Europe or the UK. With these systems in place, travelers will experience faster, more secure border processing—likely making long passport control lines a thing of the past. If you're planning to visit in 2025, be sure to prepare ahead of time and enjoy a smoother travel experience
